Middle Classes Awake to Vulgar Graft, Says Governor Walsh

The great middle classes, which have suffered such losses in their savings from the mismanagement of the public service corporations by private interests and have suffered such a loss in their earning power from the extortion of monopolies created by these same interests, are no longer blind to the pretensions of private ownership.

They have seen so much vulgar graft where they once thought they saw only respectability; they have seen so much mediocrity and downright incompetence in places which pay princely salaries, that the glamour and pretence of it all is gone. —Governor Walsh's [illegible] discussion of the second problem.

ALL FAVOR BANK IN BOSTON

In a statement written especially for the AMERICAN, President Allan Forbes of the State Street Trust Company presented today a powerful argument for the location of a regional bank in Boston.

President Forbes' statement came as one more demand to add to the many already given the AMERICAN by Boston bankers, business men and commercial organizations.

Tomorrow Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury and Secretary Houston of the Department of Agriculture will hold their hearings in Boston, and will find the Boston financial and business men in practically united front on the "Regional Bank for Boston" plan.

President Forbes caps his argument with this vigorous conclusion:

"It is for the interest of all New England banks, and especially for the small banks and manufacturers in this section, that a regional bank be located in Boston, controlled by New England men."

His statement, leading to the above conclusion, is as follows:

FACTS TELL STORY.

It is not necessary to enlarge on commercial and financial interests of New England. They stand for themselves, and it is a reflection on this community, which manufactures over one-half of the cotton goods and woolen goods and over one-half of the boots and shoes of this entire country, to compel it to explain and allow figures why we should have a regional bank.

Your question why I as a trust company officer am interested in a regional bank here for all New England is entirely pertinent and requires a plain answer.

It all comes down to a question of times of panic and stress such as we had in 1907. The fact that panics will come from time to time is the principal reason for the passing of this act. When such times come again my investigations as a member of the Chamber of Commerce convinces me that the industrial and financial needs of this community will be much better served by a bank located here and managed by men who know New England and its predominating industrial rather than speculative interests than by a bank controlled by the interests of New York.

"It will be all right for the big banks in Boston, whether we have a bank that stands alone or

SAYS REVERE TAX SHORTAGE WILL BE $60,000

Attorney Roscoe Walsworth, counsel for the Revere citizens' committee in the new Revere tax tangle, today declared that the present inquiry will disclose an "unlawful shortage of at least $60,000 in the books of the assessors and former tax collector of the town." The lawyer said the assessors and employees in the assessors' office should be dismissed.

Attorney Walsworth today secured copies of records in the collector's office for Inspector Silas Watts, who is conducting the investigation for the District Attorney's office. The lawyer said:

"An unlawful shortage of at least $60,000 will be disclosed in the books of the assessors, and the former tax collector. We don't say there has been any misappropriation, but in some cases names and amounts of the bonds have been changed through them without any reasons being given for this. It is important to us whether the taxes were paid or the amounts were paid. This will be disclosed by the present investigation.

"After consulting Attorney-General Swift, Tax Commissioner Tully and the District Attorney's office, we are of the opinion that the assessors and employes in their office should be dismissed."

TANGO EDICT IS DEFIED AT MISS SEARS' DEBUT

The dancing of the tango, the shimmering sheen of a cloth of pure gold, the blossoming of orange trees and the flashing of diamonds and other jewels on 250 women society leaders of Boston, the North Shore and New York, made the coming out of Miss Phyllis Sears at the Copley-Plaza an event which is the envy of her sister debutantes today.

The tango was danced in defiance of the ban placed on the cotillion by the Assembly last week, and the edict of S. Hooper Howard, society's pace-setter, who declared the tango too informal for society functions. Until the first rays of dawn today the tango and other ragtime airs merrily trod on the ballroom floor of the Copley-Plaza amid a scene of lavish splendor. It is estimated that the setting for Miss Sears' bow to society cost a small fortune.

Miss Sears, who is one of the best known of the younger society set, and who was presented a $100,000 necklace a couple of years ago by her grandfather, the late Francis Bartlett, as a Christmas gift, was beautifully gowned in gold and white, bearing out the scheme of golden effect of the decorations. Her party will go down in social history as the "gold debut."

Miss Sears received with her father, Herbert M. Sears of Commonwealth avenue.

The walls were hung with cloth of gold and draped with wreaths of pale lilacs, forget-me-nots and cream roses. In the centre of the foyer approach was a pink balcony under which were massed tall and potted flowers. There were bowers of American beauty roses here and there, and in the smaller ballroom were orange trees in full fruit and bloom.

The dancing started at 11 o'clock, following a sumptuous dinner. Two orchestras were used, giving continuous music both for the dinner and the dancing.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, president of the "50 Sisters," was visitor at the new society once a small fortune.

Miss Sears received with her father, Herbert M. Sears of Commonwealth avenue.

In the centre of the foyer approach was a pink balcony under which were massed tall and potted flowers. HUERTA SENDS NEW ARMY TO CRUSH REBELS

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 8.—Reiterating his intention to retain the presidency, General Huerta today ordered Federal commanders throughout the republic to inaugurate a general advance against the rebels.

The government is greatly encouraged by the defection of the Constitutionalist army at Ojinaga and the failure of Zapatistas to rally their forces after several Federal victories in the South.

As the first step in the general campaign to stamp out the revolution there began today the rapid movement of 2,000 troops northward. These soldiers, commanded by Generals Maas and Hidalgo, left in military trains which were preceded by a single engine to guard against their destruction by rebel mines.

Officials of the Department of Finance expressed belief today that the new issue of paper money by President Huerta authorizing banks to issue bills to three times the amount of paid up capital would help greatly in relieving the money pressure.

"I will talk only with both Woodrow Wilson and myself before I resign," said Dictator Huerta to an American visitor who called on him at the national palace.

"The time has gone past when I will give the slightest consideration to any proposition that I leave the presidency. Once I might have resigned at the bidding of almost anyone, but now, no. It is not a question of pride, ambition or pomp with me, but a duty—nothing else.

"What does Woodrow Wilson know of Mexico, or of what kind of government its people need? He does not understand that Mexico is like a snake, with its life in its head. And they will have to batter this old head off my shoulders before they kill me or my government.

"They say I have no more money. They do not know what they are talking about.

"Do you know how many haciendas, not ranches, but haciendas, there are in this country? Seventy thousand of them, and all great haciendas, most of which are untaxed. Each is capable of being taxed at least 5,000 pesos—$2,500. That makes $350,000,000 pesos—$175,000,000—I can put my hands on when I want to."

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR
You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre with Sage Tea and Sulphur.
When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.
Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

BUELL GIVES UP BOSTON BRIDE TO BE A MONK

That the Rev. David Hillhouse Buell, former head of Georgetown University, who married Miss Katherine Frances Powers of East Concord street, South End, has left her to enter a Trappist Monastery in Kentucky, became known through dispatches today. His bride of a year, whom he may never see again, has gone to a Catholic home.

Buell, who was a convert from the Episcopalian faith soon after his graduation at Yale, rose rapidly in the church and became president of Georgetown University. His marriage, by which he renounced all that his career appeared to hold out for him, created a sensation. His wedding vows automatically divorced him from the church.

The story of his courtship of Miss Powers includes a tale of days spent on the seashore at Allerton, Hull, following the former Jesuit's obtaining a leave of absence under, it was charged, a false pretence. Miss Powers, whose father is a well-to-do contractor, had known Buell for years.

COURTSHIP UNPERCEIVED.

The courtship, unsuspected as such, took place under the very eyes of Miss Powers' five sisters. The Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S.J., president of Boston College, said at the time:

The family of the young woman who married Buell feels terribly hurt over the occurrence, as do the members of the priesthood. The first great mistake, to put it mildly, that Buell made was to make a wrong impression to the father superior at Washington in order to obtain permission to travel. Just what he told we do not know, but of course he did not tell the real reason.

He came to Boston and met the young woman at Allerton. How often he came here and the details of the courtship are all a mystery to us. But we know that it was at Allerton that he met the young woman, and there the courtship took place without any one's knowledge outside of themselves.

TAKEN IN PROBATION.

Mr. and Mrs. Buell took an apartment in New York and he is supposed to have derived some assistance from members of his family who are wealthy. He is a son of General Buell of Civil War fame.

The circumstances under which he entered the monastery at Gethsemane are not known here. It is presumed he was received under probation and if he perseveres in a determination to reassert his priestly functions, he may be allowed to join the Brotherhood.

The Trappists maintain among themselves a silence that is broken only by religious chants and the morning greeting, "Memento mori," meaning "Remember Death." Each day they remove a little of the dirt from the hole that is to be their grave.

Actress Tells Secret

A Well Known Actress Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair and Promoted Its Growth with a Simple Home-Made Mixture.

Miss Blanche Rose, a well-known actress, who darkened her gray hair with a simple home mixture which she mixed at home, in a recent interview at Chicago, it is made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and 1 oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store for very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the required shade. This will make a gray haired person look 20 years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of hair, relieves itching and scalp humors and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair."

Dr. Conwell Declines $15,000 Pastorate

Conwell, for thirty years pastor of Grace Baptist Temple, one of the largest churches in the city, announced today that he would not accept the call to become pastor of Calvary Baptist Church of New York at a salary of $15,000 a year. WILCOX AND DIVORCEE ON OCEAN BRIDAL

NEW BEDFORD, Jan. 8.—Society and financial sets in this city were both gossiping with keenest interest today over the report that young John Wilcox, the twenty-three-year-old mill director and yachtsman and former Harvard collegian, has married Mrs. Bromley Wharton of the famous Philadelphia divorce case, who is over twice his age, and has borne her away on a yachting honeymoon to the Mediterranean. Wilcox's relatives here refuse to discuss the case however.

Wilcox is the son of Benjamin Wilcox, controlling director in one of New Bedford's largest mills. The son was appointed a mill director at the age of eighteen. He was the youngest man in that capacity in the country.

Wilcox has been away from here for two years. When he was here after leaving college he spent most of his time at the Wilcox Summer home at Padanaram. He went on long yachting trips.

Mrs. Bromley Wharton, whose divorce suit shook Philadelphia society from end to end, is a woman of wealth. She obtained a divorce after a long court struggle. Philadelphians were divided on the case.

It is said here that Wilcox met Mrs. Wharton while he was at Harvard. She has a daughter seven years old, who is said to have been left in Philadelphia while the mother is on her second honeymoon.

PARIS, Jan. 8.—The suit for $20,000 against the Journal by Mme. Steinheil, whose trial for the murder of her mother and her husband caused a world-wide sensation, has been dismissed. The cause of action was the publishing of alleged defamatory comment in the text of her memoirs.

RADIUM WORTH OVER $125,000 SENT TO BERLIN

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 8.—A jealously guarded secret was revealed today when it became known that a special messenger, carrying slightly more than one gram of radium, left Pittsburg this week for Berlin. He will deliver his precious burden to the hospital which has agreed to pay the owners, the Standard Chemical Company of Canonsburg, Pa., $125,000.

The company was assured the messenger was aboard ship if necessary to admit the consignment into Germany.

The plant of the Standard Chemical Company was established 20 years ago. Ten years ago the first radium was extracted. The commercially prepared radium could be extracted in the same way, but a new device invented by one of its chemists more than a year ago. The process is a jealously guarded secret. The radium is delivered to the hospital in lead.

Submit Definite Cures by Radium

BRUSSELS, Jan. 8.—Definite cures of cancer effected by radium are claimed by Drs. Jacobs and Rouhart, who have formally submitted to the Belgian Society of Gynecology the cases of two women who were treated a few months ago for cancer of the mamma by means of radium, valued at $200,000. The doctors assert that the radium burned away the cancer and the patients are apparently cured.

EXAMINER'S SPECIAL TELLS OF LOS ANGELES, PACIFIC'S MARVEL CITY

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 8.—Celebrating the progress and prosperity of Los Angeles and Southern California and incidentally the erection of the greatest building in the world devoted exclusively to newspaper purposes, the enormous 1,500 page anniversary number of the Los Angeles Examiner has been exhausted immediately upon publication. It is replete with valuable information and elaborately illustrated, a remarkable example of newspaper art and enterprise. It exemplifies the splendid optimism of the Golden West and the spirit of achievement which has made this great newspaper of great Southwest.

Only ten years old, the Los Angeles Examiner now ranks second in the United States in the number of advertising published, and several times has made the largest advertising gains of any newspaper in the country.

Its growth in circulation has also been phenomenal.

In this tenth anniversary number, printed in mid-week, there are 112 pages containing no less than 1,796 separate advertisements, occupying 8,071 inches of space, a total of many thousands, including both the prosperity of Los Angeles and the popularity of the Examiner as an advertising medium.

"SEVEN COLOR PAGES."

Seven beautiful front pages in full color exemplify the character of the contents of as many special sections of from 12 to 24 pages each. Other pictorial features include five double pages, showing severally, the exterior of the new Examiner building, its interior segregation into departments, the fine harbor of Los Angeles, the great aqueduct just finished by the city, and the Panama Canal. The completion of which is of such great commercial importance to the Southwest. Besides there are many page-wide halftone illustrations.

The halftones, not including the many that adorn artistic advertisements, take up 4,340 inches, or 285 columns of space. The remainder of the edition is given to news of the day and mainly to special articles, many of the latter bearing the signatures of well-known persons.

BUILDING IS A MARVEL.

A section of 24 pages describes the Examiner building, one of the newest and greatest marvels of a wonderful city. The real estate deal, a part of which was the payment of more than a million dollars by William Randolph Hearst for the ground upon which the building now stands, created a sensation at the time it was made, involving as it did the opening of Broadway, the principal retail thoroughfare, to the south, and the extension of the downtown business section in that direction.

Mr. Hearst's instructions to the architects were to provide plans for a building suitable architecturally to South California, its climate and traditions, and also fitting the most modern newspaper requirements.

In both respects success has been achieved.

"Singing architecture" is the graceful phrase suggested by this building to Charles Fr. Lummis, the noted author and an authority upon the history of the Southwest. Experts declare it perfect from an engineering standpoint. And newspapers describe it as the realization of their dreams.

This the greatest of newspaper buildings is 223 feet in length, 119 feet wide and 125 feet high. Its floor area is 102,572 square feet. Architecturally it slavishly follows no set type, but has an individuality of its own, which popularly may be compared to the mission style, but more accurately may be said to resemble the best of the Spanish renaissance.

STEEL SUPPLANTS WOOD.

The equipment is the best that money could buy, steel supplanting wood, even as furniture, wherever practicable. Approximately half a million dollars were spent in the press room, which is as long as a city block. Huge presses with a capacity of 144,000 twenty-four page papers an hour has been installed to print the daily editions of the Daily and Sunday Examiner.

Particular attention has been given to the comfort of its Examiner's Army of employees, the lighting and ventilation being ideal. Shower bath and other unusual conveniences are provided.

While a million population for Los Angeles in 1925 is the keynote of the promotion features of this special edition, it sets forth not only the progress and prosperity of the large city on the Pacific Coast, but presents the climate and achievements of every other section of what is known as Southern California.

Complete and elaborate reports to the Examiner show that in the face of the world-wide financial conditions throughout the country, the last year has been notable in every town and county of Southern California for advancement of every kind. The commercial products of the eight most southernmost counties last year, according to the Examiner's figures, reached a total value of $268,228,000.

NATION'S BEST ROADS.

Good indication mentioned of this prosperity is the fact that there are 55,000 automobiles in Southern California, and there is not a day in the year when they cannot be used for pleasure rides over the best system of roads in the West. Los Angeles County itself contains more miles of good roads than any other county in the United States. The city of Los Angeles spent nearly $3,000,000 last year on streets and boulevards.

The Examiner declares that Los Angeles' rate of growth of population is greater than that of any other city in the world. With more than half a million now and a gain of about a hundred thousand last year the mark that will make Los Angeles the first city of a million in the West will be reached before the next decennial census.

Much attention is given in this special edition to the Panama Canal, which is expected to accelerate greatly immigration to Southern California and stimulate its commerce.

That Los Angeles is the nearest port to the South of the United States for the Panama Canal trade and that Southern California is brought by diagonal practically as close to Southern Europe as is New York are two of the striking statements made in this connection.

It is asserted that cheap fuel oil, ideal climate and good ocean and rail transportation combine to make this section the most promising manufacturing section in the country.

Stress is laid upon the home building in Southern California, 4,250 residences having been erected in Los Angeles city alone last year. Not only were all building records broken, but the bank clearances, postal receipts, school attendance and all other tests of progress and prosperity were in excess greatly of previous years.

FIRST IN WEALTH.

Los Angeles County is declared to be the first now in wealth and population in the State. It contains more than one-fourth of the taxable wealth of California. It is said that it still has large undeveloped resources in agriculture and commerce.

The Examiner's special edition devoted particular attention to the completion of the great Owens River aqueduct, 232 miles long, which will deliver 258,000,000 gallons of pure mountain water a day, more than sufficient to supply a city of 2,000,000 inhabitants. When its power plants are completed Los Angeles will produce enough electricity to meet all demands within its urban boundaries with the exception of power for street cars.

Never before the resources and advantages of Los Angeles and its tributary environs been set forth more fully nor more attractively than in the special edition of the Examiner, which is said to be rivaled only by the Panama Canal exposition.

Many Boston people will go down to Providence today for the ball which Mrs. Robert W. DEMAND THAT 6 MOOSE EXPLAIN CUSHING VOTE

Progressives all over Massachusetts discussed angrily today the action of six members of their party in the House who deserted their party candidate for Speaker and made the election of Gradus L. Cushing, standpat Republican, possible. Charges of "treachery" and that the six had "betrayed their party" were freely made by the Progressive leaders.

The six men — James M. Lyle of Chelsea, Cleveland A. Chandler of East Bridgewater, Alfred N. Fessenden of Townsend, Charles H. Webster of Northfield, Fred W. Cross of Royalston, George L. Pierce of Lexington—were besieged with questions and demands for explanations by their colleagues and constituents today.

The deserters were condemned at a meeting of the 1911 Progressive City Committee at No. 209 Huntington avenue.

Charles Sumner Bird, Progressive candidate for Governor at the last election, said: "I am astounded that Mr. Cushing's election was made possible by Progressive votes.

CHELSEA GIRL WAKES TO FIND BURGLAR BUSY

When Mary Fraser, seventeen, living with her aunt, Miss Mary E. Silvea, of No. 39 Maverick street, Chelsea, suddenly awoke in her room early today, she called:

"Auntie, is that you."

"Shut up, "came a gruff man's voice in reply, "and if you don't I'll kill you."

Then just as unexpectedly the girl felt a sharp sting across her face as the man slapped her severely. She called her aunt, who appeared just as the burglar escaped.

The robber had entered the house with a false key, had ransacked two closets, but was forced to leave empty handed. The girl said he had a flashlight but she was unable to get a view of his face, so she could not give the police a good description of the man.

That Harry W. Smith of Worcester, inventor, retired manufacturer and sporting man, has received from Thomas G. Plant the $300,000 which he claimed for his services leading to the deal between Mr. Plant and the United Shoe Machinery Company, was definitely settled today.

This $300,000 has been the subject of much litigation. Mr. Smith brought suit to recover it and won his case, but Mr. Plant appealed; a new trial and a new verdict for Mr. Smith was followed by another appeal.

POLICE BEGIN HOUSE CANVASS IN NAME FRAUD

Police sergeants today began making a house-to-house canvass in every Boston ward, questioning all alleged signers of the Kenny, Curley, Smith and Keliher nomination papers. The probe is begun at the request of District Attorney Pelletier.

Special attention will be paid, in the short time remaining before election day, to the alleged fraudulent jurats, in order that the real number fraudulently sworn to and filed with the Election Commissioners may be ascertained.

It is reported that the Grand Jury is likely to bring in scores of indictments in connection with the mayoralty frauds.

Councilman Thomas J. Kenny was enthusiastically received at numerous rallies in South Boston and Dorchester. The only disturbance at any Kenny rally came when somebody in the William E. Russell School in Ward 16 offered to "punch in the jaw" Councillor Edward E. Collins, a Kenny speaker. The threatened casualty was averted.

William Newton denied Curley's charge that Newton had packed a Kenny rally with disturbers in the hope of hurting Curley's candidacy. Herman Hormel declared that George J. Weiler, who signed the affidavit to that effect read by Curley, never was a Republican, as Curley claimed.

Kenny rallies will be held tonight at Jubilee Hall, Grove Hall; Hibernian Hall, Charlestown; Cohen Hall, No. 32 Cross street; Schwartz Hall, No. 13 Leverett street; Kossuth Hall, No. 1695 Tremont street, Roxbury; Claremount Club, Ashland street, Roslindale, and Needham Hall, No. 1485 Columbus avenue.

Curley has asked Police Commissioner O'Meara to hereafter investigate all disturbances at Kenny rallies, in order that the blame may not fall on Curley men.

Kenny branded as a falsehood the Curley charge that he hired men to break up his own rallies.

SOUTH BOSTON VOTERS PLAN MASS MEETING TO PROTEST CURLEY MEN

A mass meeting of South Boston citizens who seriously object to the methods employed by friends and supporters of Congressman Curley to break up rallies held in the interest of Thomas J. Kenny is being arranged in South Boston. All the citizens of South Boston regardless of their preference on the mayoralty are being asked to attend, including clergy, business and professional men of the district.

The purpose of the meeting is to enter a public protest against acts of hoodlumism in campaign rallies and demanding that the decent citizens of South Boston stand up and demand that fair play be given to all candidates for office.

Patrick J. Dooley, president of the club, charged in his remarks opening the meeting for organization that he has positive knowledge that the young men who have been responsible for the disturbances come mostly from another section than South Boston and that they are prominently connected with the Curley campaign.

The officers elected are: Patrick J. Dooley, president; William F. J. O'Mara, vice president; Daniel J. Flynn, financial secretary; William J. Griffin, recording secretary; Martin L. Martin, William J. Conroy, William E. Ambrose, Thomas J. Griffin, Martin Mulkern, directors.

SOAP ON HAIR CAUSES DANDRUFF, SCALP GETS DRY, HAIR FALLS OUT

Girls! Get a 25-cent bottle and try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse."

After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still, use soap as sparingly as possible and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil. In a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant, and possess an incomparable softness and lustre.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; stimulates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

Mmc. Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it.

MANY SALES REPORTED AT BIG AUTO SHOW

By J. C. KERRISON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5—Boston has been exceedingly well represented at the auto show here and several visitors have placed orders for early delivery of cars.

The Marmon little six is a beauty in style and construction. The new car has centre control with left hand drive. The dash board is particularly free. The four and big six are also shown, as is a limousine Frank E. Wing will have sent to his Boston headquarters.

Harry Fosdick is dividing his time between the Lozier and Hupmobile exhibits. The Lozier is showing its new four-cylinder, an attractive, capable and sturdy car. The six-cylinder, several open bodies, runabouts and touring cars, as well as a limousine, are displayed.

The Hupmobile chassis shows excellent constructive detail and workmanship.

Both the big and little Studebaker cars show finish and refinement that would do credit to cars selling for much more money. New England Sales Manager Masters and J. S. Donovan, retail distributor in Boston, are both on the field.

The white painted Columbia roadster stands out among the Veile family. The exhibit includes two chasses and several body models and possesses all the features that go to make up a finished motor car. Factory Representative F. E. Bradfield and F. L. Roberts, the new Boston agent, are greatly pleased with results.

A new car that is attracting attention owing to its recent great work in the laboratory of the A. C. A., when it established a world's record for endurance, economy and flexibility, is the Moline-Knight, one of the latest of the sleeve valve motors. Treasurer Harrison Turner of the Treat Hardware and Supply Company, Lawrence, has secured the agency for this car in Eastern Massachusetts and Southern New Hampshire and will shortly establish salesrooms in Boston.

The Case people are showing three completed cars and one chassis.

Louis Disbrow, Bob Burman, Eddie Hearne and others spend most of their time at the Case booth.

Becomes Great-Great Grandmother at 101

Mrs. Ruth Hartford, one hundred and one, of Rochester, N. H., has become a great-great-grandmother by the birth of a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Wendall Mason of Belmont. She is even prouder of the rare distinction than of having passed the century mark with faculties little impaired and health good.

Man and Woman in Hotel Suicide Pact

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—A man and woman, who registered as "Jack Peterson, Jr., and wife, New York," were found dead in their room in the Belmore Hotel. The man was shot through the heart; the woman through the head. A revolver was grasped in the dead man's hand.

Reads Whole Bible 4 Times on Cruise

Captain Anselm Thibadeau, master of the little British schooner, H. S. M., got so short of reading matter on the last passage to Boston that he read his Bible through four times. He had started to read it again when he and his vessel came into port.

CASSIDY TELLS OF A SWEEPING LABEL RULING

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The United States Supreme Court sustained the United States Food and Drug Act of 1906 in deciding a labeling question that will have sweeping influence on tricky and cunningly devised declarations on labels. The case before the Supreme Court was brought against the Antikamnia Chemical Company of St. Louis charged with selling headache tablets containing a habit-forming drug. The package declared the tablets contained acetphenetidin, but not stating this was a derivative of acetanilid. Misbranding was charged because they printed on their packages that it did not contain any acetanilid, the basic substance of the drug.

The Court reversed the action of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, wherein it was held that because the form prepared by the pure food and drug board of the Department of Agriculture did not specifically mention acetphenetidin the manufacturer was within the law in stating on the formula that the headache tablet he was putting on the market did not contain any acetanilid.

This decision means considerable to those charged with enforcing the food laws. I have, during my career, made purchases on the open market of gherkins, pickles and onions presented with alum. The reason for manufacturers doing this was to preserve the products, keeping them in a firm, compact state. This practice by some pickling houses in Massachusetts and other places is still in vogue, while medical authorities have pronounced alum as an astringent. When taken into the system in quantities used to preserve condiments, it acts very injuriously upon the stomach. I have a complaint before me of a child lying seriously ill in Roxbury from eating pickles.

This decision by the Supreme Court will furnish some set standard. I have in mind some cases of my own where I caused the arrest of manufacturers for the use of alum in pickles.

GUN SHORTAGE PERIL TO ARMY, WOOD WARNS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—"If you sent our troops into war as they are now without guns or ammunition, it would be absolute slaughter," General Leonard A. Wood told the House Military Committee. "If called into the field suddenly, we should have to go with a very small allowance of ammunition, even for the guns in the hands of the troops and we should have neither guns nor ammunition enough for our field artillery forces."

He declared that his judgment was not influenced by the Mexican situation, and advised Congress that it should appropriate $240,000,000 for field guns and ammunition for the regular army and $3,000,000 for the militia.

Referring to the United States being a rich country he said: "If we are unprepared for war there would be more temptation for a country to strike us and if it makes up its mind to do so it can strike us at any time."

These field guns wanted for a force of 500,000 men, the general declared, would be used for defence purposes as this country would not start to go abroad with an army of that size.

On the other hand, he said, it was hardly likely that any nation would send any smaller army than 500,000 or 600,000 across the Atlantic ocean to this country, after disposing of this country's fleet, if ever such an event happened.

MINISTERS OF SOUTH END PLAN FOR CHURCH DAY

Ministers' associations all over this city are getting ready for the observance of Go-to-Church Day Sunday, February 8. Shop windows have been reserved for announcement cards bearing invitations to GO-TO-CHURCH BUTTON.

Go churches. In the South End the Rev. S. H. Roblin, pastor of the First Universalist Church, will call the ministers of that section together tonight, when plans will be submitted for a vigorous campaign for this special day.

Every one in the South End will be invited to go to church on February 8. Those who can't walk will have an auto sent to their homes. Many autos have been offered for that day. Several representative men in the churches will have their autos-trailers, marked with "Go-to-Church Day" badge, for a week preceding the special day. Any one having an auto to be put into service is asked to send word to the Rev. Dr. A. H. Nazarian, pastor of People's Temple, who waits at least ten for that occasion.

Other ministers want the same number for their churches. Any one willing to put an announcement card in his shop window may send word to the general committee or to the ministers in his locality. Nearly every minister in Greater Boston has pledged himself to observance of the day.

The ministers of the Massachusetts Association of the Church of the New Jerusalem voted at their monthly meeting, held yesterday, to take an active part in the campaign for going to church. The vote said:

We indorse the Go-to-Church Day movement inaugurated here in Boston by the AMERICAN, and we shall be glad to be informed of the plans as they mature and take our part in them. William St. Wunsch, No. 3 Whiting street, Roxbury, Mass.

William A. Thurston, who has just returned from studying plans in the west for making Go-to-Church Day successful, said at a meeting of the young people in People's Temple:

What I've seen in Joliet, Ill., about Go-to-Church Day convinces me that nothing like this has so completely aroused the different places to going to church. You should have seen the crowds going to church on that day in Joliet. Why, the town only has about 30,000 population, and on that special day at least 40,000 people were in the churches.

Maryland Law Bars Pastor as Senator

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 8.—The right of a clergyman to hold a State senatorship has been questioned in the upper branch of the General Assembly. Frank E. Williams, elected from Cecil County as a Republican, was not allowed to qualify, pending the result of an inquiry into his right to the office because of the constitutional provision that "no minister or preacher of the gospel shall be eligible as Senator."

THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME

Hall Caine's Greatest Story

If You Did Not See Opening Instalments Read This First

MARY O'NEILL begins her story by telling of how her father, born in Ellan, the son of peasants, had gone to America, become rich, and had then returned to his birthplace, where he married the daughter of Captain O'Neill of the Coastguard and had changed his name from Daniel Neale to Daniel O'Neill. She tells of her own birth and of her father's disappointment for if a boy had been born he would have been Lord Ras, by right of his mother.

She tells of Father Dan, the priest, and of her mother, an invalid from her earliest memory, and of her Aunt Bridget, who came to keep house for Daniel O'Neill and brought with her her daughter and her stepdaughter. Her aunt soon came to rule the house and to domineer over Mary and her mother and to make them both very unhappy. Quarrels, in which Mary's father always took the side of her and her mother, ensued, and after one of them he declared that the children must all go to school.

One Christmas eve she hears the "waits" and conceives the idea of singing the waits herself. In her impatience she forgets to put on either hat or cloak and steals out with nothing on but a pair of thin slippers and a no-sleeved frock that leaves her neck and arms bare. She is taken into the home of Doctor Conrad and is kept there all night. In the morning she makes the acquaintance of the doctor's son, a boy named Martin, whose greatest delight is to play he is an explorer.

She is sent to school, where the teacher is a creature of her aunt's. One day the teacher catches her whispering and is about to whip her, when she is saved by Martin Conrad.

One day Mary and Martin go "exploring" in a boat and land on a rock. Their boat floats away, and late at night they are found, fast asleep in each other's arms.

It is decided, against her mother's protests, to send Mary to a convent in Rome. She starts in care of Father Dan, the priest, and on the journey she meets young Lord Ilsa. He tries to kiss her and she strikes him in the face, but finally at the intercession of Father Dan, she offers him her lips.

MY GIRLHOOD

Twelfth Chapter.

OF our journey to Rome nothing remains to me but the memory of sleeping in different beds in different towns, of trains screaming through tunnels and slowing down in glass-roofed railway stations, of endless crowds of people moving here and there in a sort of maze, nothing but this, and the sense of being very little and very helpless and of having to be careful not to lose sight of Father Dan, for fear of being lost—until the afternoon of the fourth day after we left home.

We were then crossing a wide rolling plain that was almost destitute of trees, and looked, from the moving train, like green billows of the sea with grass growing over them. Father Dan was reading his breviary for the following day, not knowing what he would have to do in it, when the sun set in a great blaze of red beyond the horizon, and then what did a big round black ball, like a captive balloon, seemed to rise in the midst of the glory.

I called Father Dan's attention to this, and in a moment he was fearfully excited.

"Don't worry, my child," he cried while tears of joy started to his eyes. "Do you know what that is? That's the dome of St. Peters'. Rome, my child. Rome!"

It was 9 o'clock when we arrived at our destination, and in the midst of a great confusion I walked by Father Dan's side and held on to his cassock as we passed. Dan he carried in his own leg, and a basket of nine, down the crowded platform to an open carriage outside the station.

Then Father Dan wiped his forehead with his print handkerchief and I looked up to him, and the driver cracked his long whip and shouted at the pedestrians while we rattled on, and the city seemed strange, which seemed to be full of statues and fountains that were lit by a great white light that was not moonlight and yet looked like it.

But all the while we stopped at a little door of a big house which seemed to stand, with a church beside it, on a high shelf overlooking the city, for I could see many domes like that of St. Peter lying below us.

THE REVEREND MOTHER.

A grill in the little door was first opened and then a lady in a black habit, with a black band round her forehead and white bands down each side of her face, opened the door itself, and asked us to step in, and when we had done so, she took us down a long passage into a warm room, where another lady, dressed in the same way, only a little grander, sat in a big red armchair.

Father Dan, who still wearing his knitted muffler, bowed very low to this lady, calling her the Reverend Mother Magdalene, and who raised him in English but with a funny sound which I afterwards knew to be a foreign accent.

I remember that I thought she was very beautiful, much as beautiful as my mother, and when Father Dan told me to kiss her hand I did so, and then she put me to sit in a chair and looked at me.

"What is her age?" she asked, whereupon Father Dan said he thought I would be eight that month, which was right, being October.

"Small, isn't she?" said the lady, and then Father Dan said something about poor mamma which I cannot remember.

After that they talked about other things, and I looked at the pictures on the walls—pictures of Saints and Popes and, above all, a picture of Jesus with His heart open in His bosom.

"This child will be hungry," said the lady. "She must have something to eat before she goes to bed—the other children have gone already."

Then she rang a hand-bell, and when the first lady came back she said:

"Ask Sister Angela to come to me immediately."

A few minutes later Sister Angela came into the room, and she was quite young, almost a girl, with such a sweet and face that I loved her instantly.

"This is little Mary O'Neill. Take her to the Refectory and give her whatever she wants and don't leave her until she is quite at ease and comfortable."

"Very well, Mother," said Sister Angela, and taking my hand she whispered: "Come, Mary, you look tired."

I rose to go with her, but at the same moment Father Dan rose too, and I thought him say he must lose no time in finding an hotel, for his Bishop had given him only one day to remain in Rome, and he had to catch an early train home the following morning.

This fell on me like a thunderbolt. I hardly know what I had felt myself to expect, but certainly the idea of being left alone in Rome had never once occurred to me.

My little heart was fluttering, and dropping the sister's hand I stepped back and took Father Dan's and said:

"You are not going to leave your little Mary, are you, Father?"

It was harder for the dear Father than for me, for I remember that, fearfully flurried, he stammered in a thick voice something about the Reverend Mother taking care of me, and how he was sure to come back at Christmas, according to my father's faithful promise, to take me home for the holidays.

THE DORMITORY.

After that Sister Angela led me, sniffling a little still, to the refectory, which was a large, schooling room, with rows of plain deal tables and forms ranged in front of a reading desk that had another and much larger picture of the Sacred Heart on the wall above it. Only one gas-jet was burning, and I sat under it to eat my supper, and after I had taken a basin of soup I felt more comforted.

Then Sister Angela lit a lamp and taking my hand she led me on a stone staircase to the dormitory, which was a similar room, but not so silent, because it was full of beds, and the breathing of the girls, who were all asleep, lay around like the watchmaker's shop in our village, only more church-like and solemn.

My bed was next to the door, and after Sister Angela had taken off my undress, and tucked me in, she made her voice very low, and said I would be quite comfortable here and she was sure I was going to be a good little girl and a dear child of the Infant Jesus, and then I could not help taking my arms out again and clasping her round the neck and drawing her head down and kissing her.

After that she took the lamp and went away to a cubicle which was partitioned off the end of the dormitory and there I could see her prepare to go to bed herself—taking the white bands off her cheeks and the black band off her forehead, and letting her long light hair fall in beautiful wavy masses about her face, which made her look so sweet and home like.

But oh, I was so lonely! Never in my life since, not even when I was in my lowest depths—have I felt so little and helpless and alone. After the Sister had gone to bed and everything was quiet in the dormitory save for the breathing of the girls—all strangers to me and I to them, from mere loneliness I covered up my head in the clothes just as I used to do when I was a little thing and my father came into my room.

I try not to think bitterly of my father now, but even at such a time to know how he could have cast me away so lightly. Was it merely that he wanted peace for his business, and saw no chance of securing it in his own home except by removing the chief cause of Aunt Bridget's jealousy? Or was it that his old grudge against Fate for making me a girl made him wish to rid himself of the sight of me?

I do not know. I cannot say. But in either case I try in vain to see how he could have thought he had a right, caring nothing for me, to tear me from the mother who loved me and had paid for me so dear; or how he could have believed that because he was my father, charged with the care of my poor little body, he had control over the little bleeding heart which was not his to make to suffer.

He is my father—God help me to think the best of him.

Thirteenth Chapter.

A half past six in the morning I was awakened by the loud ringing of the getting-up bell, and as soon as I could rouse myself from the deep sleep of childhood I saw that a middle-aged nun with a severe face was saying a prayer, and that all the girls in the dormitory were kneeling in their beds while they made the responses.

A few minutes later, when the girls were chattering and laughing as they dressed, making the room tingle with twittering sounds like a band of linnets in the Spring, a big girl came up to me and said:

"I am Mildred Bankes and Sister Angela says I am to look after you today."

She was about fifteen years of age, and had a long, plain-featured face which reminded me of one of my father's horses that was badly used by the farm boys; but there was something sweet in her smile that made me like her instantly.

She helped me to dress in my brown velvet frock, but said that one of her first duties would be to the lay sisters who made the black habits which all the girls in the convent wore.

It was still so early that the darkness of the room was just broken by pale shafts of light from the windows, but I could see that the children of my own age were only seven or eight altogether, while the majority of the girls were several years older, and Mildred explained this by telling me that the children of the Infant Jesus, like myself, were so few that they had been put into the dormitory of the children of the Sacred Heart.

In a quarter of an hour everybody was dressed and combed, and then, at a word from Sister Angela, the girls went trooping and laughing downstairs to the Meeting Room, which was a large hall, with a platform at the farther end of it and another picture of the Sacred Heart, pierced with sharp thorns, on the wall.

THE AMERICAN GIRL.

The Reverend Mother was there with the other nuns of the convent, all pale-faced and slow eyed women wearing rosaries, and she said a long prayer, to which the schoolgirls there were seventy of eighty altogether) made responses, and then there was silence for five minutes, which were supposed to be devoted to meditation, although I could not help seeing that some of the girls were whispering to each other while their faces were down.

After that, and mass in the church we went scurrying away to the refectory, which was now warm with the steam from our breakfast and bubbling with cheerful voices, making a noise like water boiling in a saucepan.

I was so absorbed by all I saw that I forgot to eat until Mildred pushed me to do so, and even when my spoon was half way to my mouth something happened which brought it down again.

At the tinkle of a hand-bell one of the big girls had stepped up to the reading-desk and begun to read from a book which I afterwards knew to be "The Imitation of Christ." She was about sixteen years of age, and her face was so vivid that I could not take my eyes off it.

Her complexion was fair and her hair was auburn, but her eyes were so dark and searching that when she raised her head, as she often did, they seemed to look through and through you.

"Who is she?" I whispered

"Alma Lier," Mildred whispered back, and when breakfast was over and we were trooping back to lessons she told me something about her.

Alma was an orphan. Her father was very rich and his home was in New York. But her mother lived in Paris, though she was staying at an hotel in Rome at present, and sometimes she came in a carriage to take her daughter for a drive.

Alma was the cleverest girl in the schoolroom, and at times in the event of terms, when parents and friends came to the convent and one of the cardinals distributed the prizes, she had so many books to take away that she could hardly carry them down from the platform.

A CHILD'S WORSHIP.

I listened to this with admiring awe, thinking Alma the most wonderful and worshipful of all creatures, and when I remember it now, after all these years, and the bitter experiences which have come with them, I hardly know whether to laugh or cry at the thought that such was the impression she first made on me.

My class was with the youngest of the children, and Sister Angela was my teacher. She was so sweet to me that her encouragement was like a kiss and her reproof like a caress; but I could think of nothing but Alma, and at noon when the bell rang for lunch and Mildred took me back to the refectory, I wondered if the same girl would read again.

She did, but this time in a foreign language, which, as Mildred whispered—from the letters of the Blessed Margaret Mary Alacoque—and my admiration for Alma went up tenfold. I wondered if it could possibly occur that I should ever come to know her.

There is no worship like that of a child, and life for me, which had been so cold and dark the day before, became warm and bright with a new splendour.

I was impatient of everything that took me away from the opportunity of meeting with Alma—the visit to the lay-sisters to be measured for my new black clothes, the 3 o'clock "recreation," when the nuns walked with their classes in the sunshine, and, above all, the voluntary visit to the Blessed Sacrament in the Church of the Convent, which seemed to me large and gorgeous, though divided from the middle by an open bronze screen, called a Cancello—the inner half of which, Mildred whispered, being for the inmates of the school, while the outer half was for the congregation which came on Sunday to Benediction.

But at 4 o'clock we had dinner, when Alma read again—this time in Italian—from the writings of Saint Francis of Sales—and then, to my infinite delight, came a long recreation, when all the girls scampered out into the convent garden, which was still bright with afternoon sunshine and as merry with laughter and shouts as the seashore on a windy Summer morning.

The garden was a large bare enclosure, bounded on two sides by the convent buildings and on the other two by a yellow wall and an avenue made by a line of stone pines with heads like open umbrellas, but it had no other foliage except an old tree which reminded me of Tommy the Mate, having gnarled and sprawling limbs, and standing like a weather-beaten old sailor, four-square in the middle.

A number of the girls were singing and dancing around this tree, and I felt so happy just than that I should have loved to join them, but I was consumed by a desire to contrive to close quarters with the object of my devotion, so I looked eagerly about me and asked Mildred if Alma was likely to be there.

"Sure to be," said Mildred, and hardly were the words out of her mouth when Alma herself came straight down in our direction, surrounded by a group of admiring girls, who were hanging on to her and laughing at everything she said.

RIDICULED BY IDOL.

My heart began to thump, and without knowing what I was doing I stopped dead short, while Mildred went on a pace or two ahead of me.

Then I noticed that Alma had stopped, too, and that her great searching eyes were looking down at me. In my nervousness, I tried to smile, but Alma continued to stare, and at length, in the tone of one who had accidentally turned up something with her toe that was little and ridiculous, she said:

"Goodness, girls, what's-this?"

Then she burst into a fit of laughter, in which the other girls joined, and looking me up and down they all laughed together.

I knew what they were laughing at—the clothes my mother had made for me and I had felt so proud of. That burnt me like iron, and I think my lip must have dropped, but Alma showed no mercy.

"Dare say the little doll thinks herself pretty, though," she said. And then she joined on, and the girls with her, and as they went off they looked back over their shoulders and laughed again.

Never since any human creature—not even Alma herself—made me suffer more than I suffered at that moment. My throat felt tight, tears leapt to my eyes, disappointment, humiliation and shame swept over me like a flood, and I stood squeezing my little handkerchief in my hand and feeling as if I could have died.

Woman Saved Twice Dies from Burns

VALLEY FALLS, R. I., Jan. 8.—Twice did Mrs. Mary Ryan of No. 26 Chambers street rescue her neighbor, Mrs. Mary Jones, seventy-five, from death. The third time she failed, and today Mrs. Jones is dead at the Memorial Hospital in Pawtucket of burns received when she upset a kettle of fat on her dress.

The first time Mrs. Ryan found the aged woman overcome by gas. Prompt measures restored her to consciousness. The second time Mrs. Jones accidentally set her dress afire and was again saved. Then she upset a kettle of fat and her dress caught fire. Mrs. Ryan tried in vain to extinguish the flames with her own garments.

ALL FACTIONS OF CITY DEMOCRACY UNITE IN NEW KENNY CLUB

A "Who's Who" list of the prominent Democrats composing the new Kenny Democratic Campaign Club shows that this organization has brought together members of the Boston Democracy who have hitherto been opposed in factional contests. Former Senator Teeling of Charlestown is president of the club.

Never in Boston politics, so far as recalled here, have the Democratic leaders handed together so firmly in support of a single candidate. The Fitzgerald-Lomasney wing of the party, the old Donovan-Doyle-Kelleher faction, the "Red Devils" and their historic foes, the "Tip Carts"—all these and other Democratic factions are found firmly welded together in this remarkable Kenny band. The names and political activities of some of the members include:

BRADY, PATRICK J., Ward 23—Vice-President of the Democratic City Committee, chairman of the Ward 23 Democratic Committee, president of the Cleveland Club, a political club.

CARR, PATRICK B., Ward 4—Former member of the Legislature; identified with the labor movement.

COLLINS, EDWARD A., Ward 14—Member of the Governor's Council, former member of the Legislature, campaigned for Governor Walsh, also rest of Democratic State ticket, throughout the State. Prominent in fraternal circles.

COLLINS, WALTER L., Ward 20—Member of the City Council, prominent in political and social circles.

Today is THE day on Beacon Hill.

Now that the Speakership contest has been decided and Gratton is Chairman of Republican Caucus, five of Ward 11 has been elected by the side of six Progressives, who defeated their own candidate, leaving the six have considerable appointing to do to their constituents.

* * *

Here are the six Progressives who deserted their party candidate, Fred W. Cross of Royalton, Alfred N. Brandon of Townsend, Thomas M. Lyle of Gloucester, Charles H. Webster of Northfield, Cleveland A. Chandler of Lunenburg, Samuel and George E. Briggs of Lexington.

* * *

Four other important factors in the election of Cushing were Representatives Mitchell of Springfield, Logan of South Boston, Hall of Pittsfield and Lefavi of Fulmer, Democrats, who refused to follow their leaders and change their votes from Teague to Webster, the latter being the Progressive candidate. If they had followed the leadership of Representatives Teague and Lomasney the Progressive candidate would have been elected on the first ballot.

* * *

The election of a Speaker was followed by a spirited fight over the question of taking away from the Speaker the power to appoint committees and placing it in the hands of a committee on committees to be elected by the members of the body. The Republican leaders managed with the aid of Progressive votes, to down the proposition.

WHY I ASK YOUR VOTE

YOU, Mr. Voter, will receive this week a special four-page circular which contains a detailed statement of the platform upon which I stand in asking for your vote. It gives you facts about my record. It tells you who I am, what my training has been, what work I have done—tells you, so far as a circular can tell, what manner of man I am. What I have done in the past is of value only in this: It shows the way I am pointing. It guides you my ideals, my tendencies. It isn't always what a man has done that is of most value. Of infinitely greater value is what a man is. Campaign promises are easy to make and easy to forget. You know this. The circular you will receive gives a detailed platform. But greater than this detailed platform, which you will read, is my platform founded on my wish to give to Boston during the next four years in the Mayor's office all that is best in me, all that I have learned in business and in law, all that has fitted me to serve the people with efficiency and honesty of purpose. Only my faith in my past record enables me to speak to you like this. I stand before you asking for your keenest investigation, asking you to do what you in your heart believe to be best for yourself and your city. On these terms do I ask for YOUR vote on election day, Tuesday, January 13; and I hope to receive it.

BIG BETS ON KENNY MADE BY WARD LEADERS

Ward betting on Kenny was an added feature of the campaign today.

Former Alderman "Dike" Leary bet "Pie" Paul $100 even that Kenny would carry Ward 2.

Senator "Jim" Timilty announced that he had $1,000 in place even that Kenny would carry Ward 18. Timilty's bailiwick.

Former Alderman Michael J. Leary, popularly known as "Dike," is a resident of Ward 2 in Charlestown. Four years ago he was working hard for Fitzgerald for Mayor and Ward 2 went heavily for that candidate.

Now Leary is hustling for Kenny, and he backs his confidence with cash.

"Dike" Leary "sees it with" Isaac Paul, a Curley supporter, and one thing led to another until each man put up $100 that their respective candidates will carry Ward 2.

State Senator "Diamond Jim" Timilty was at the State House, where betting talk was heard amid the chatter of inauguration matters.

Timilty is the Democratic ward chairman of Ward 18, president of the James P. Timilty Democratic Club and the ward leader. He heard somebody say that Curley claimed he would sweep Ward 18 as though Timilty didn't exist. With an extra glitter in his eyes and his diamonds, Timilty said tersely that he had one thousand cold dollars to put up even that Kenny would carry Ward 18.

POLITICAL NOTES

Candidate Kenny will be accorded a reception Friday evening at the hall of the Ward 18 Democratic Club, of which Senator James P. Timilty is head, in Odd Fellows' Hall, Berkeley and Tremont streets. Mayor Fitzgerald and City Clerk James Donovan are expected to attend. Candidate Kenny will make a short speech.

All eyes are centred on the action of the Hendricks Club meeting, which will be held in Ward 8 Sunday afternoon.

* * *

Thomas J. Collins of Ward 13, South Boston, showed his staying powers to Curley's constituents at a Kenny rally in Ward 17. Collins held the platform in the Hugh O'Brien School until Candidate Kenny arrived and wore an expansive smile all through the ordeal. Even the hammingtree admitted he "delivered the goods."

* * *

Senator Joe Leonard of the Fourth District, which includes Wards 9, 12 and 17, is so sure of Curley's election that he is arranging for a banquet to be tendered his Ward 9 supporters, to which Candidate Curley will be invited.

John F. Hoar, chairman of the Ward 24 Democratic Committee, declares that Kenny will carry his (Hoar's) ward by a vote of two to one. "The election of Curley will put Boston back ten years," says Hoar.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF GOVERNOR DAVID I. WALSH TO THE LEGISLATURE

New Massachusetts Executive Outlines Vigorous Policy and Proposes Important Reforms to End Evils of the Railroad Situation.

Governor Walsh entered the chamber of the House of Representatives at 12 o'clock to deliver his message to the General Court. The joint convention of the Legislature in the Senate Chamber of Representatives. His remarks were frequently interrupted by applause.

The Governor recommended reforms of local importance, the establishment of a paid Board of Health, the investigation of labor disputes, a Constitutional Convention to consider various reforms (which included the initiative and referendum), the extension of the civil service laws, the abolition of the Executive Council, the submission of the woman suffrage question to the voters, and taxation revision; the election of incorporate practices are forbidden, contributions by private individuals to campaign and election expenses, amendments to the workmen's compensation act, the establishment of a central purchasing agency for State institutions, a reduction of the salary of the chairman of the Harbor and Land Commissioners of the Port of Boston, the creation of the number of commissioners and laws to further the development of agriculture.

THE BOSTON & MAINE.

The most vital part of the address, which dealt with the railroads, read in part as follows:

Our railroad problems continue to be of the most engrossing and pressing importance. The loss to our investors resulting from a decade of lawlessness and mismanagement is nothing less than a public calamity.

One critical problem—the present condition of the Boston & Maine R. R. road—calls for present discussion.

Its shareholders are threatened with the loss of their entire investment. Its service is crippled for lack of money and credit. It is unable to do its part in our part development.

The Boston & Maine system is the artery of our whole northern New England country. If it is not prosperous, that section cannot be prosperous.

This intolerable condition, menacing alike to investors and to the general public, is attributable to three main causes.

First—The system itself was built up in direct disregard of sound business principles.

Second.—The revenues of this railroad have also been improperly, if not fraudulently, diminished by certain wasting and parasitic contracts.

Third—Within the past three years, since the New Haven has taken open control of the Boston & Maine, it has accumulated a floating debt of over $7,000,000 through procedure which indicates recklessness and imprudence.

DIVORCE MUST COME.

There is now a settled and definite consensus of opinion in favor of the separation of the New Haven and the Boston & Maine.

There is now a settled and

If we are not to have a great financial catastrophe in our New England railroads we must now —immediately—avert the danger by a reorganization which will re-establish the credit of the corporations, wash out the parasitic contracts which have been sapping the life-blood of the system, and provide hereafter for a management both faithful and competent.

Clearly at this time this railroad is not in any position to demand or to expect any substantial increase in rates, either passenger or freight, till the owners of the system show to the public a willingness and ability to operate in accordance with sound principles.

There is the spirit of confiscation in Massachusetts. But so long as our public utilities are privately owned, the private ownership must assume and bear the responsibility of management and must pay the penalty for inefficiency.

If those who ought to lead in the task of rehabilitating this railroad do not rise to their opportunity and duty the community is not without recourse. The great middle classes which have saved such losses in their savings from the mismanagement of the public-service corporations by private interests, and have suffered such a loss in their buying power from the extortion of monopolies created by these same interests, are no longer blind to the pretensions of any to ownership. They have seen so much sugar-malt whisky they even thought they saw only pearl-white. They have seen so much nothing and dot of the Incorporated in place which put prunes, salt on that the almond and prunes of it all is gone. The people are less gullible now.

And if the Governor to the express line is through a paved road, and it has been a tremendous success. It is just completing the most stupendous engineering task of the age at the Isthmus of Panama, with glory to the nation while private enterprise in Massachusetts has just built a fifteen-mile railroad which may cost the Boston & Maine almost four times the average cost per mile of railroads in this Commonwealth.

If the Commonwealth is obliged to save a necessary public utility because those who are primarily interested will not save it, the Commonwealth will do so under circumstances most favorable to itself, and without sentimental compunction for those who would not help themselves.

Governor Walsh then took up matters of local importance, beginning with the following remarks:

Governor Walsh then took up matters of local importance, beginning with the following remarks:

It has been more than half a century since the people of Massachusetts have considered their constitution as a whole for the purpose of revising it and making it consistent with the conditions of the day. There is a strong public demand for certain changes in our Constitution

MANY REFORMS NEEDED.

Legislature cause to be assembled with the consent of the electorate a body of citizens, who shall be selected without party designation to formulate amendments to our Constitution, which will make our Constitution conform more nearly to the needs and to the public opinion of the day.

In following proposals I suggest an order of personal urgency for constitutional authority:

1—The initiative, the referendum and the recall of elective officers.

2—Biennial elections.

3—The abolition of the Executive Council and enlarging the powers of the Lieutenant-Governor.

4—Woman suffrage.

5—Rights of cities and towns to deal in necessaries of life in times of public distress.

6—Government by majority.

7—The right of the Governor to veto specific items in appropriation bills.

8—Behavioral legislation, whereby the Commonwealth may help people of small means to acquire homes of their own.

9—Revision of taxation system.

10—The making of workmen's compensation compulsory.

The State is very much in need of revenue. The tax which foreign corporations doing business in this Commonwealth is a normal and proper way of raising it.

In urging the need of a constitutional convention, I have pointed to our taxation system as demanding immediate reform. Our constitution was framed at a time when intangible personality as a form of property was unknown. Stocks and bonds and other credits did not come within the purview of those who drafted the instrument, and the uniformity of rate upon all classes now recognized as property imposed by the requirement that taxation shall be "proportional" has led to the escape of millions of dollars of taxable value, with a great yearly loss to the revenue of the State, and to lessening of confidence in a government that exacts from the small holder of taxable property the last cent while the holder of large amounts of intangible goes untaxed.

PERFECT TAX LAWS.

To amend the Constitution even by a constitutional convention will take time, and pending such action the present law should be strengthened that it may more effectively be enforced.

The direct primary has made the selection of even greater importance than the election, as candidates for public office and there is widespread opposition throughout the Commonwealth to those provisions of the primary law which compel citizens to become enrolled in a political party before being allowed to participate in a primary election.

I recommend that party enrollment be abolished, and the enactment of legislation providing for the printing of separate columns the candidates for nomination of the various political parties; that each voter be permitted to make his choice of the party column from which he desires to make his selection of candidates. He should have the right to do this secretly, without disclosing his party affiliations.

The object which our election reforms should attempt to accomplish is the abolition of contributions by private individuals to campaign and election expenses. These contributions, so long as they are permitted, will be sources of influence which are too often unfortunate. The State should assume every legitimate campaign and election expense, and all other expenses should be strictly prohibited.

It would be no less absurd for political parties to pay the expense of polling and counting the vote on election day than to have the expense of printing the voters' envelopes and ballots. These have been so much vulgar grail which they once thought they saw only pearl-white. They have seen so much nothing and dot of the Incorporated in place which put prunes, salt on that the almond and prunes of it all is gone. The people are less gullible now.

And if the Governor to the express line is through a paved road, and it has been a tremendous success. It is just completing the most stupendous engineering task of the age at the Isthmus of Panama, with glory to the nation while private enterprise in Massachusetts has just built a fifteen-mile railroad which may cost the Boston & Maine almost four times the average cost per mile of railroads in this Commonwealth.

If the Commonwealth is obliged to save a necessary public utility because those who are primarily interested will not save it, the Commonwealth will do so under circumstances most favorable to itself, and without sentimental compunction for those who would not help themselves.

Governor Walsh then took up matters of local importance, beginning with the following remarks:

STATE OWNERSHIP UNLESS B. & M. SAVES ITSELF, SAYS WALSH

"If the Commonwealth is a utility (the Boston & Maine), those who are primarily interested will not save it, the Commonwealth will do so under circumstances most favorable to itself, and without sentimental compunction for those who would not help themselves."

Governor Walsh then summarized his railroad program. To Boston & Maine may leave the New Haven and reorganize—or the Commonwealth will take a hand.

His words mark a direct step toward State ownership of the road. The old argument against ownership—that the State would have to pay for all the "water" in the road's stock—is shattered by the Governor's statement that the Commonwealth will act "under circumstances most favorable to itself" and without sentimental compunction" for the class who in the past have come forward to buy public ownership would be the innocent purchasers" upon the they paid

JURY SAYS 'NOT GUILTY;' JUDGE SAYS '6 MONTHS'

A father, mother and their son figured in an unusual trial in the Superior Criminal Court today in which Judge Chase, after the jury had acquitted the father of a charge of beating the son, sentenced the accused man to six months in jail.

Cornelius Harrington of No. 5 Lovis place, South Boston, was the father. His wife and their thirteen-year-son John testified and then Policeman Brown told of finding the son unconscious from a beating. Later the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty.

"Do you gentlemen believe that this man simply slapped the boy or that he beat him?" asked Judge Chase.

"Slapped him," said the jury.

"Then you believe his testimony rather than that of his wife and his boy?" queried the judge. "Well, I believe the story of the mother and the boy. And I sentence the defendant to six months in the House of Correction on the other charge—that of violating his probation, and I will order his wife to be paid 50 cents a day while he works at Deer Island."

Harrington was originally arraigned on the beating charge at the order of Judge Fallon of the South Boston Court. Harrington was in charge of drunkenness. Judge Fallon noted the case, ordered it filed, ordered it filed by [illegible] the Court [illegible] arrested.

GALVIN WANTS BOARD OF 5 TO PROBE INSANE

A resolution calling for a state's investigation of the treatment of the insane in the Massachusetts asylums has been filed at the State House by Mr. [illegible] of Boston, president of the Society, of which Dr. George W. Galvin is president. The resolve is the result of the deaths from alleged brutal treatment in some of the state hospitals and the revelations made at the recent hearing in Worcester.

The resolve provides for a commission of five with power to summon witnesses and require the production of books and other records.

Section 5. This resolve shall take effect on the passage.

THE RETURN TO BOSTON.

Agnes had been gloomy, broken and sad since their rescue. She felt herself forever blackened and disgraced—not so much by her act in winning Mary to the wild trip to New York—as by her own supreme sacrifice which had made it possible for them to escape in the end. That was why, as they followed a stream of people into the gates of the train shed, she slipped to one side, was caught in an outgoing stream, and attempted to disappear.

A patrolman had escorted them to the station. Agnes scurried through the waiting room and was just emerging onto the sidewalk to face New York alone—despairing and miserable—when she met this man again. He took her back and restored her to the probation officer.

And so they returned to Boston [illegible] and mother met them [illegible] Station. Mary [illegible] with [illegible] was [illegible] the street from the boarding [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] good to her. But it [illegible] nothing but [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] that the event described is not one [illegible] to happen again. I have already said that I hold the police very highly and believe their work is of the greatest value. Yet it is a fact that a policeman with a grouch, and his grouch might very easily have resulted in irreparable wrong.

A New York woman had come to [illegible] [illegible] seven years old, and a widow, but she was extremely pretty and youthful in appearance. A relative in Boston had given her employment upon the death of her husband.

She was a complete stranger here, for she had lived in New York all her life. And it was her habit in the evening after her work to go out for an hour—usually between six and seven—and walk about to learn the streets of the neighborhood.

One night she came back and told me this incident.

This serial is written in the form of the life story of a country girl who fell victim to conditions in Boston. No character appears in the serial that is not taken from real life. No important incident occurs which has not actually happened in Boston within five years. And the conditions portrayed are minimized, rather than exaggerated.

The serial is offered as a picture of the lives of Boston's Little Lost Sisters. It is designed to shed some light on causes underlying the terrible conditions of the city; and it is hoped some remedies may be suggested.

The facts upon which the serial is based were given to the AMERICAN by one of Boston's best informed social workers who vouches for every statement. The serial is in the form of the life story of JANET WRIGHT—one of the Little Lost Sisters who found herself—and is told by herself.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DON'T MARRY HIM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Do you think a marriage between first cousins ever proves happy? I am a young lady, twenty-two years old, and of Jewish parentage. My cousin and I are very much in love with each other and want to be married. My parents do not oppose the match and your advice on the matter would be greatly appreciated. E. F.

IT is possible to be "appy married to a first cousin, but I hope you are unselfish enough regarding the welfare of the next generation to know such a marriage is not for the best.

NO

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About six months ago I met a young man who seemed to care for me very much. He's a very pretty fellow and is all a girl could wish for, but when I talk of marriage he always changes the subject. I am beginning to care for him. Would you advise me to keep it up, as I am twenty-one years old? M. C.

YOU must not talk to him like that no matter what your age. Proposals of marriage must come from the man! No man's love was ever won by the methods you are pursuing. Neither must you regard the age of twenty-one as desperate.

OF COURSE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen, and in love with a young man two years my senior. We are both employed in the same place, and he usually takes me home and go lunch with him, and always appeared to like me very much.

He asked me for one of my signet rings, and I gave it to him, and in return, he gave me his ring. About two weeks ago I came in and he didn't bother to say "good morning," and seemed cool toward me all day. Now he doesn't even pay attention to me when I pass his desk. Do you think I ought to ask him for my ring? SORRY.

GET your ring, and never again make such an exchange unless a marriage engagement warrants it.

New System of Fat Reduction

Here's a new way for all fat people to laugh together at the old legacies—Obesity. The saying that "there is nothing new under the sun" does not now apply to fat people any more. Here is something new for them a new sensation, a new pleasure, a new and graceful figure, easily found by anyone who is passing beyond the limits of slimness. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription; that harmless combination of fat-defying elements discovered by one of our foremost physicians. Now, from the same high authority, there comes another idea—the idea of condensing these same pure, harmless ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bed-time, they help the stomach to digest of all the fatty foods, converting them into compact, solid flesh, muscle and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets regulate the entire system—do for you what bodily exertions and self-denial cannot do, and the fat, once routed, is gone for good. You can get them at any drug store in the form of Prescription Tablets or they will be sent direct by the Marmola Co., 7447 Hastings Building, Detroit, Mich. A small case—sufficient to bring lasting results—is but 75c.

His Proposals

No. 1—To the Woman Old Enough to Be His Mother

Copyright, 1914, by [illegible] News Service

By NELL BRINKLEY

THE loveliest woman he knew—the schoolmate of the mother he could hardly remember.

Her hair was gold, touched with the cold snow of coming silver—her eyes had the loveliest purple shadows around their lids and the blue of them could glimmer so understandingly, no matter what might be the tale he told her.

Her heart was warm and kind; the mother-woman looked out steadily behind her eyes; about her wherever she moved there seemed drawn a compelling circle, and whoever stepped into the zone of it was steeped in instant calm and utter content. Her temper was a thing like days in Paradise—unchanging, unruffled, all-tolerant. Her home had always held wide-open arms for him when he had flying trips away from school. Her dogs knew him and his side-partners. And one stunning day this boy—with the rose-leaf of babyhood scarcely rubbed off his cheeks—ruffled up his sleek head—gulped and—proposed!

And his mother's schoolmate drew him over to her knees and draining all amusement, in the deepness of her big heart, out of her smile, she deliberately blurred her beauty out of his heart.

She showed him her hand—before she gripped his young shoulder with it. "Did you ever look at it close, dear little boy? See the lines? It's crumpling up—because I'm getting old, you know. I've a double-chin—just coming. My hair, because it's blonde, you'd never know was threaded thick with gray.

"Look close—it's almost silver. The wild rose in my cheeks is just a rabbit's foot dashed on from a little round box filled with the 'Bloom of Youth.'

"The shadows of my eyes are just blue pencil—and I'm getting fat! And the big twist of my hair at the back of my neck isn't my own—not. I am an artist, that's all, and a contented woman.

"That's why, with your blind baby eyes you did not ever see that I am old enough to be your mother. NO, NO, NO!—someday you will LOVE a girl—and you'll never know what real downright gladness is until that day when you remember that I wouldn't have you.

"That is just a kind of mistaken interruption in the sort of love we really have for one another, Billy-boy. I've mothered you and you've been my boy, and will be, most of all, the day you fall truly in love with a girl!" And then there was a sullen silence while the smile on her face died and tears glimmered in her eyes. But the boy held his bewildered eyes lowered. And then——

"Oh"—and her voice was as even and kind as always. "How is little Rose—with the brown eyes—whom you brought up last week?"

And in two shakes he was telling of the pretty ways of Rose and an image was fading out of his heart.

And the woman old enough to be his mother smiled behind her white hand.

Their Married Life

HELEN EXPERIENCES THE DIFFICULTIES OF A PEACEMAKER IN A LOVERS' QUARREL

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

HELEN glanced questioningly at Louise's ringless hand on which had glittered Bob's engagement ring.

"I've returned it," briefly.

"You thought that would goad him into action?" persisted Helen mercilessly.

Louise, who was crouching a tea cake by her plate, did not look up or answer.

"Oh, I could have told you it wouldn't," despairingly. "Bob's like Warren—he just freezes up. He'll never send or call again if—"

"Accurately that is what he wished," returned Louise coldly.

"Oh, dear! He looks absolutely haggard. I can't tell you how he's changed in these last few weeks."

And Louise's dark eyes looked straight at Helen now. "He's never said a word—except that once."

"That's all he's ever said. But that's the nature—the more deeply they feel the less they say."

The mutinous in the pain-stricken balcony. "The elbow worms and curling tips quivered as she listened to the plaintive melody. She had refused to go to Helen's apartment for just this—she would think she was courting the chance of seeing him, but she had consented to meet Helen at the hotel for tea.

Helen, who had not seen her for over a week, was startled at the change. She was unbecomingly thinner, all her bright color had fled, and yet her very pallor had a loveliness of its own.

"Did I tell you Helen and I are going to Florida on trip?" Louise asked suddenly.

"To Florida?"

TO TRY TO FORGET

"Yes, lots of people I know are at Palm Beach now. I'll get out like mad and forget." Her laugh had a harsh note.

"Does Bob know? Did you write him when you sent back the ring?"

Louise shook her head. "I don't want him to know until I'm gone. He might think it only a ruse to influence him."

"How long will you stay?"

"Until April."

"You'll be perfectly wretched," declared Helen with conviction. "You'll be thinking of Bob every moment."

"Possibly," admitted Louise coldly. "But I'd be thinking of him here, and I'll at least feel that I've restored some of my self-respect if I go away."

"If I thought you could forget, I'd want you to go—for I believe there's many men who might be even happier than Bob ever could. But I know you can't, you can't forget him any more than I can forget Warren."

"I can try," briefly. Then with a startled "Oh!" Louise put her hand to her throat. "That man—the one that's just sat down at the table back of you! Doesn't he look like—"

Helen turned. The poise of the man's head and shoulders was startlingly like Bob's, but the full face view disbelied the likeness.

"I bother you for it, and yet—" faltered Louise. "Whenever I see any one that looks like him it makes me sick and faint."

For the last half hour a definite purpose had been formulating in Helen's mind, and now with some of the old determination she prided herself on, she forced herself to rise from the chair on the adjoining table, and, sauntering over, began examining a fold of her cape that had fallen to the dressing room floor. "I forgot it," she explained, as she returned to the dressing table.

"Why, I'm sorry you're not to see Bob," said Louise.

It wasn't quite necessary. Barry's log off before the noon hour, and Bob, in the next moment, could be "Over on Dover Street" in a taxi. "Give me three minutes," she said to the girl at the dressing table, "and then I'll be ready to go."

A LAST CHANCE

Helen entered the little room hurriedly and shut down the door.

Bob sought it. Mr. Barry's log off before the noon hour, and Bob, in the next moment, could be "Over on Dover Street" in a taxi. "Give me three minutes," she said to the girl at the dressing table, "and then I'll be ready to go."

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular during most of the time today, markets opening with prices mixed and with narrow range for the majority of issues. In the afternoon in New York less support was afforded and declines included Southern Pacific ¾, Missouri Pacific ¾, New Haven 1¼, American Telephone ¾, American Can ¾, Amalgamated ⅞ and Baltimore & Ohio ¾. Gains included Canadian Pacific ¾, Reading ¾ and Steel ⅛.

In Boston among issues to show gains were Boston & Maine, up 1, and United Fruit, up 1¼. American Telephone was off ¾. Mines were irregular, advances including North Butte ¾ and Calumet & Hecla 4, while among declines were Butte & Superior ¾ and Granby ⅝.

SENTIMENT MORE CHEERFUL

The undertone was firmer in New York market opened, and although prices were irregular sentiment was more cheerful. Wall Street appears to be of the opinion that the attitude of the Department of Justice anticipates no change to an unfavorable extent in the threatened legal suit, since even corporate interests will be allowed that is regarded as fair and reasonable in financial circles. A more aggressive campaign by federal officials was feared more than tariff revisions, changes in the banking system or even the prosperity of the country, and this forced a reduction of prices.

The action of the Bank of England rate was expected, but had not wholly been discounted and was a salutary influence. Gold was also opened around 2½ per cent., which encouraged speculation.

NEW HAVEN A WEAK FEATURE.

At the start of trading New Haven was a weak feature, declining a point because the November report showed that twelve out of eighteen companies in the system had not earned fixed charges. Pressure upon Baltimore & Ohio was resumed, but it had support and after selling off a fractionally recovered and sold a trifle higher. The market grew stronger during the morning, but the day's range was narrow. The market was active during the first hour, but unusual business slackened in the last half of the forenoon.

READING THE LEADER.

Reading was the leader of the rise in the first hour and continued to be the main feature of speculative interest. There was more talk about the possibility of its distributing its Jersey Central holdings, but it accumulated today to the some interests which have been in it for a long time on a large scale of purchases, and covering helped advance this issue.

The decline in Union Pacific may have been partly due to the rumor that there would be formidable opposition proceedings to the proposed distribution of Baltimore & Ohio stock, but Union Pacific directors today voted in approval of the distribution and also to pay common stockholders a bonus of 2 a share, as was recommended by the executive committee. Holders of Union Pacific convertibles are reserved are inclined to consider the distribution more as a "lemon" than a "melon."

BIG COPPER INCREASE.

There was not much business in copper issues during the morning, traders waiting to learn how much surplus stocks had increased in December. An increase was universally expected, but the extent of it was a surprise. The Copper Producers' Association reported that at the end of last month stocks in this country had increased 13,349,438 pounds. The maximum of forecasters had been 12,000,000. Stocks on hand at the end of December totalled 91,-426,867, against 47,929,429 at the end of November. Production amounted to 139,990,421 in December and 134,-987,596 in November. December deliveries totalled 95,480,983, including exports while the total for November was 228,724,661. Previous to these copper statistics being made public it was stated that consumers were not buying the metal either in this country or in Europe.

TRADING QUIET HERE.

Trading was quiet in the Boston market when it began and the list was mixed as to prices without showing much range to business. Boston & Maine and United Fruit were among strog issues, while New Haven was as weak a sin New York. Some coppers advanced. The local market was lacking in interests on the whole.

MAINE CENTRAL BOND ISSUE.

It is stated in a Portland dispatch that Maine Central directors at a meeting there discussed a proposal that the road issue 5 per cent. bonds and turn the proceeds over to the Boston & Maine in payment for the latter's holdings of $16,000,000 of Maine Central stock.

RAIL EARNINGS DECREASE.

The November returns of most railroads show that there has been a heavy shrinkage in their incomes. Boston & Maine and operated lines report an increase of $218,962 in deficit, the net deficit of New Haven decreased $672,586, the increase of New York, Ontario & Western's deficit was $92,549, the net operating revenue of Western Maryland decreased $132,129, the net income of St. Louis & Southwestern decreased $56,676, and that of Norfolk & Western $97,614.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The Bank of England has reduced its minimum rate of discount from 5 to 4½ per cent. The proportion of the bank's reserve to liabilities is 49.30 per cent. against 33.46 last week and compares with an advance from 30% per cent. in the corresponding week last year.

Hyden output in December was 2,122,000 pounds of fine copper, the largest in the history of the company.

The car surplus on January 1 totalled 190,521, an increase of 83,008.

The Bank of France reports for the week a decrease of 5,054,000 francs in gold on hand.

A Pullman official says business of that company is sufficient to keep a full quota of men at work at its plants. It has more than 11,000 employes on its payroll.

M'ADOO IN HUB TO CONDUCT THE BANK HEARINGS

one that is "hitched" to New York, because they have to carry for their banks large New York balances, and because of such balances they will have enough influence with the big New York banks to get what they need through them out of the New York financial banks.

The smaller the banks the more important it is to it that we have a New England regional bank.

I have followed closely the arguments pro and con in favor of a New York hearing, and I am led to the conclusion that it is the best way to get the facts, and submit to New York so much of the regional system that it will be confirmed by the same effects and powers as a great central bank, and not be subject to, contrary to the policy of the administration and the tenor of the outcry, to be the general impression that a great regional bank, with the central bank, would furnish more ample facilities for the rediscounting of commercial paper. This is not so, for all regional banks will be entirely controlled and on the contrary the directors of the New England regional bank would naturally be more sure of only after the decision of the New York meeting had been filed, that there was by a regional bank in New York.

BANKING GENERAL.

The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange has come on record for a regional Bank to be located here, and on file the Chamber of Com-

The directors of the New England section and Leather Association held a special meeting at No. 166 Essex street, voted unanimously in favor of a regional bank here.

The Boston trust companies are practically a unit in favor of the regional bank, and the trust company residents will hold a meeting to-morrow to discuss the necessary steps to be taken in law relating to banking in order that they may become members of the regional bank.

Practically all the Boston banks are seen to be opposed to the federal reserve against the partition of New England. It now develops that Wall Street has been the first and first to have Boston included in the New York Region, and who finally consented to retain the branch bank here, have about given up the hope of getting Boston and have practically reconciled to the fact that Boston have the rest of New England.

Prominent Boston bankers declare Connecticut would be better served by a Boston Federal Reserve Bank than by one in New York.

Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury Department and Secretary Redfield of the Department of Agriculture, came here today. They will open hearings at the Chamber of Commerce tomorrow morning, continuing through Saturday.

The first visit personally by made against the looming off of Connecticut from New England, to which it unquestionably belongs.

President William A. Gaston of the Shawmut National Bank, who is leading the fight for a Federal Reserve Bank here, expressed the situation as follows:

"The purpose of the Federal Reserve Bank feature of the Currency Bill was to establish reserve centres in all parts of the country and prevent all the money in the country from settling in Wall street.

"Naturally, the New York bankers wished to establish a great Federal reserve district centering in New York, and including Boston and Philadelphia, but such was not the purpose of the bill, and I do not think the New York bankers will have power to do what they wish.

"The southern part of Connecticut is being claimed by New York, with some justice, perhaps, because much commercial business goes through New York. I am of the opinion, however, that the State of Connecticut would be better served from a Regional Bank located in Boston.

"I am, therefore, in favor of the Boston Federal Reserve Bank serving all New England. It is the logical, and desirable thing. The vast wealth which centres here is entitled to this consideration, and the advantages from the location of the Reserve Bank here, instead of in New York, are obvious. It is not merely a matter of local pride. It is that we would be better served by our own bank than by a New York bank.

"I am quite sure we shall get it. I have no secure Congress to get our Reserve Bank right, and we want it to cover all New England. The trust companies are for the Reserve Bank movement, and we shall all go in as soon as the State law is amended to permit us to do so."

President John J. Mcrtin of the Exchange First National Bank said:

"MUST HAVE BANK HERE."

"The chief advantage of a local Regional Bank is the fact that the managers would be local men who know us and New England values. Another advantage of the bank will be its willingness to discount our paper in times of stress, and it is natural that the Boston Federal Reserve Bank would give New England bankers a better deal than a New York bank, which would be inclined to take care of the New Yorkers first. You can't eliminate personalities from anything that man has a hand in. The idea of the Federal Reserve Bank is to be impartial, but its officers will be men, and friendship and influence cannot but have their usual power. Therefore, in the interest of New England, we must have a New England bank officered by New Englanders."

Speaking for the banking houses, William F. Fitzgerald of Fitzgerald, Hubbard & Co., declared:

"I am for a Regional Bank in Boston that will serve New England in the region. There is no excuse or necessity for lopping off Connecticut, which has always gone with New England, and Connecticut will find her best interests lie with us rather than with New York.

"I believe there should be twelve Regional Banks instead of eight, and that the banks in the centre of the country should have every opportunity to grow upon their own resources. New York, of course, is trying to arrange for a vast bank in that city, and the Federal reserve notes to use the millions of the country banks deposited elsewhere than in New York, but it is the part of leaders to do so. I believe this Currency Bill is a magnificent thing and that it is going to come out to solving our difficulties and eliminating panics than anything else that legislation has ever produced."

Conditions—Boston American Picture Answer Contest

The Boston American new 1914 Picture Answer Contest is a contest of skill and both form in all readers of the Boston American, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

One hundred and fifty-five cash prizes will be given, absolutely free, for the correct answers to the pictures.

All employes of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

The contest will consist of seven five puzzle pictures, to be printed one each each day, consecutively, in the daily and Sunday American, first picture Sunday, January 4th.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running, or which may be run by the Boston American, shall not debar any one from entering this contest.

Every contestant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one, two, three, four or five SETS of answers, but each SET must contain only ONE answer to each picture.

Each SET will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize, and not more than one prize will be awarded in any one family.

Each and every answer must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American, or on a piece of white paper the same size, accompanied either by the puzzle picture furnished by the Boston American or a piece of paper thereof, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the contestant on each answer blank.

Do NOT send your solution in "ink" form, i. e., do not write answers with pen and ink on a piece of paper.

In case there are no complete sets of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions, giving weight to skill and judgment.

In case of a tie, awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way, the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Under no circumstances should contestants send in their answers before the end of the contest, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. Keep your answers from day to day and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together, at one time.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answer in with the correct solutions will stand, no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers published.

All answers must be delivered to the Boston American Contest Headquarters, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the specified time limit. The Boston American reserves the right to extend days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, and may then send in all together, at one time.

The Boston American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed Contest Editor, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass.

As all answers will contain written or printed matter, if mailed it is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at the letter rate, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first-class matter. The Boston American reserves the right to reject any sets of answers on which stamps for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

There will be no charge for the use of the coupon. Unaltered names of titles will be printed in the Sunday American each week, beginning with the first puzzle picture, until, including, each Sunday, will contain, among others, the CORRECT answers to the pictures to be used during the week beginning with each Sunday list publication. Contestants should keep these lists carefully, as they will be of great importance in the contest. Address all communications to Contest Editor, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass. Questions will be answered, as far as possible, through the columns of the Boston American. If contestants desire personal replies, they should enclose a two-cent postage for reply, or they may phone Main 5180, or call in person.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that may be deemed necessary for fairly and properly conducting the contest, and the decision of the Boston American Contest Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entering of a contestant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

The Contest Plan

Each day for 75 days, commencing Sunday, Jan. 4th, the Boston American will print a picture representing the name or title of a song, book, poem, explorer, play, proverb, river or lake, or other appropriate subject.

$4,000 in cash prizes will be awarded to the 155 competitors who send in the largest number of correct answers.

There will be no catalogue or book of titles to buy. The American will furnish this information absolutely free to contestants by publishing each week in the Sunday American an official list of names or titles, among which will be found the CORRECT answers to the pictures to be used during the week commencing with each such Sunday publication.

When New York Takes Snuff, Shall Boston Sneeze?

What is the reason that certain local banking interests are OPPOSED to the establishment of a regional bank in Boston? Why are they WILLING that the service of this important institution should be rendered in New York? Is not the ghastly spectacle of our railroads, ruined by New York banking interests, a GRIM ENOUGH LESSON? New England investors have lost more than $200,000,000 in the last three years by incompetence and chicane of New York control of New England property.

Shall we LICK THE BOOT that has kicked us? Shall we always dance attendance upon New York interests? Is New England always to play the part of Lazarus to New York Dives? It was not always so. New England DID NOT WAIT FOR NEW YORK to fire the shot "heard 'round the world." We fired it ourselves at Lexington. The Green Mountain boys did not wait for New York to take Ticonderoga, though New York should have taken it.

In the glorious days of America's maritime supremacy, ships BUILT IN NEW ENGLAND AND MANNED IN NEW ENGLAND did not wait to get their clearance papers from New York. But they boldly sailed from New England ports, carrying the American flag into every harbor in the world. We did not wait for New York's approval to start the first railroad in America. We started it ourselves at Quincy. We did not wait for the judgment of New York on the evil of slavery. It was a New England man who established "The Liberator" in Boston. They were New England poets, clergymen and writers who SWELLED THE VOICES OF FREEDOM until they made human slavery cease to mock American liberty. It was a Massachusetts regiment that responded first to Lincoln's call. When New York revolted against Lincoln's drafts, Lincoln sent Massachusetts troops to quell the rioting and TO MAKE THE GREAT METROPOLIS OBEY THE LAW necessary for the preservation of the union.

New England would make no invidious comparisons with New York. As Americans we are proud of her many great commercial achievements. But we would remind some of our backward business men that New England needs no other leadership for any enterprise that may be found within her own confines, and we point to her own great past to prove it.

We trust that the Treasury Department will hear those who represent the old New England spirit in their demand for a New England regional bank.

We Learn by Trying

And a Little Child Must Learn to Walk SOME TIME. This Refers to Government Ownership

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company

This newspaper, year after year, talked and urged parcels post—which means government ownership of the country's express business.

Some said that parcels post would be criminal. Nearly everybody said it was bound to be a failure.

The express companies explained that the people were not intelligent enough to do what the express companies did.

But parcels post is here AND IT EARNED FOR THE GOVERNMENT ABOUT THIRTY MILLIONS OF DOLLARS THE FIRST YEAR.

And as a result of parcels post, the postoffice of the United States is now on a paying basis for the first time since 1883.

To put government work on a paying basis is, of course, not the most important thing. The most important thing is good work and ECONOMICAL SERVICE FOR THE PEOPLE.

The people could afford parcels post because of its convenience, usefulness and economy, even if it didn't mean a profit to the government.

But the fact that the government makes millions out of parcels post and now runs its own express business in such a way as to make the whole postoffice profitable ought to convince some of the doubters.

We are through advocating parcels post, for it is here. We are still advocating government ownership and municipal ownership of other things. And municipal and national ownership will come.

THERE WILL BE MISTAKES MADE, BUT WE LEARN BY TRYING.

Some things are done by private individuals, spurred on by love of power and money, a little better perhaps than the government will do those things at first. But the government WILL DO THEM.

It would be foolish to send a little child out to walk in a crowded street at first, but it must learn to walk sometime. And eventually the crowded street will not frighten it.

It would be a mistake, undoubtedly, for the government, national or municipal, to try to run every public service AT ONCE, but the government—that is to say, the people—must learn to do these things, and will do them.

The people will own and manage for their benefit all of the NATURAL MONOPOLIES that have been misused by private individuals for private benefit.

AND YOU MAY MAKE UP YOUR MIND TO THAT.

The government will own and run railroads, telegraph, lighting plants—and in time many other things that need not be suggested at present.

Meanwhile, observe that the first thing actually tried, the parcels post, is a success.

And get over your pessimism about the power of the people to do things instead of having them done—as, for instance, private Wall Street gentlemen DID the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

The combined intelligence of the people in the long run is better and abler than the individual.

The Great Marlborough

By REV. T. B. GREGORY

IT was 205 years ago that the Great Marlborough was handed his walking papers by Queen Anne, and the most illustrious man in the world, bowing his head to the storm, felt as did the old Cardinal Minister of Henry the Eighth—"O, how wretched is that poor man that hangs on princes' favors."

John Churchill—for such he was to begin with—just plain John Churchill—was one of the luckiest men that ever lived. If fortune ever had a darling, a petted, pampered favorite, upon whom she delighted to pour her richest favors, it was Churchill. All the Graces, all the good and kindly Angels, all the gracious, smiling Fates seemed to camp about him, and, when he moved, to follow him with their ever-renewed and never-failing benedictions.

And in a way this seemed to be all right, for Churchill, in an important sense, earned his illustrious honors. He was selected by his government to beat down the oppressive rule of Louis XIV., and he performed his task to perfection; and in crushing the power of that high-headed old despot, he did England and the whole world the service that can never be fully appreciated.

As a general Marlborough is almost without a peer. He never lost a battle, never besieged a city without taking it, and never undertook anything in a military way without accomplishing it. Measured by the ideals of his time, he was a great man. In fact, the greatest man, and it was only right that he should have his splendid reward.

But John Churchill, reappeared in the Duke of Marlborough, and John Churchill, while a very great man, was anything but a good man. Selfish, unscrupulous, unfeeling, a stranger to high principle, and never knowing the joy of a great and noble enthusiasm, it was only natural that his fortunes should crumble.

The Old Incorruptible Integrity seemed to say in the case of Marlborough: "Without intending or wishing it, you did much for mankind. You smashed the armies of the Reactionists and by your splendid victories paved the way for modern liberty and progress, and for this you shall have your Ducal crown and splendid palace. But because you were always mean and selfish, thinking more of John Churchill than of humanity and right, you shall have a taste of humiliation with it all—a dash of mud on your splendid honors."

Longevity—To Die Before One's Time as Most Do Is Self-Murder—Only One in 35,000 Lives as Long as He Could

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service

SEVERAL years ago the writer received a letter from a man claiming to be over one hundred years old.

At the age of sixty-five this man had been old and ill.

Taking himself in hand at that age, he began to live scientifically, according to his own understanding of the laws of health.

He gave up tea and coffee, tobacco and alcoholic and malt drinks; he gave up meat, fish and fowl, and lived on cereals, vegetables, fruit and olive oil.

He drank a tablespoonful of olive oil five times daily, and gave himself an olive oil rub twice a day.

As a consequence all his physical ills dropped away. Rheumatism, gout, heart and liver weaknesses, sleeplessness, shortness of breath, fatigue, all these symptoms vanished.

He gained in strength and vitality, and enjoyed life with all the zest of a normal youth.

Investigations proved that the man had written the truth, and that he had passed the century mark, and this his only physical ailment at the advanced age was dimness of vision.

Without question 90 per cent. of the people who believe they have reached an age when mortal maladies must naturally assail them and who are middle-aged sufferers from combinations of diseases could be restored to vigor and health would they follow such rules of hygiene as this man followed.

The most illustrious example of this kind in the world's history was Louis Cornaro, the celebrated Italian nobleman, who lived to be 102 years old.

Cornaro was sickly from his birth, and the doctors pronounced him a complete physical wreck. Their warning that he was doomed to an early death aroused him to a careful consideration of his condition. He saw wherein his manner of life was responsible for that condition, and resolved upon a radical change; he formulated a few rules for his method of living, which would at least insure that what was left of his life should be lived to its fullest value.

It was a simple method—easy to follow, pleasant in practice. It needed no drugs, no expense of time or money. It proved even more successful than he had expected—prolonging his life sixty years beyond the time at which he had been given up to die!

His failing vigor was restored, his enfeebled faculties renewed their vitality. He whose condition at forty had been pronounced utterly hopless lived with vigorous body and mental faculties alert to the end of a century.

Cornaro's book, containing a minute account of his method of living—a work he finished at the age of ninety-five—has been translated into all cultivated languages, and will ever be esteemed a classic and a standard by the medical profession and the discriminating public.

He is the only one who, at the end of a century, ever wrote—was ever able to write—a statement, authoritative because based upon experience of the means by which others with but little effort on their part could enjoy the unspeakable delights of a long life of uninterrupted perfect health.

Louis Cornaro selected the diet that agreed with him, and kept to it. He did not make the claim that every other human being should eat and drink exactly as he ate and drank, believing that tastes and appetites and systems differ.

What he did demand of all sensible human beings who desire health was ENTIRE TEMPERANCE. Very little food, very little drink, he found restored him to health after he had been declared an incurable invalid.

At the age of eighty-eight he said: "As years multiply I lessen the quantity of my food, and I may truly say that I never knew the world so beautiful until I reached old age. Eating but little, my appetite is normal, and I keenly enjoy bread, light broths, an egg and all foodstuffs that are suited to the old—but always in SMALL QUANTITIES, and only in quantities easily digested."

Mr. William F. Butler, the able translator of Cornaro's book, says: "Today only one man in 35,000 lives as long as he could—only one man in 160,000 as long as he should. Sickness, premature old age and premature death are so common that they have come to be accepted as a necessary part of the established order of things. But they are not!"

Barring accident or some quite exceptional circumstance, there is no excuse for sickness, nor for death from any cause other than extreme old age. As a rule, he who suffers from sickness, feebleness or failing faculties is alone to blame—with him rests the remedy. Woeful evidence of the present universal untimely end of human lives—the real race suicide—is at hand in the official figures of "The American Table of Mortality":

"Of every 100,000 persons enjoying good health at the age of thirty, 5,355 are dead before forty; 18,302 are dead before fifty; 32,214 are dead before sixty; 54,859 (more than half) are dead before seventy; 82,160 are dead before eighty; 95,550 are dead before eighty-five; 99,009 are dead before ninety—only three out of every 100,000 men and women in good health at thirty live to be ninety-five."

To be free from sickness is to live; to die before one's time, as most do, is self-murder!

How easy it is for man to live the healthy, natural life that avoids premature death is demonstrated in Luigi Cornaro's account of his own memorable experience.

Self-control, temperance, deep breathing, fresh air—these things spell health.

But few are the individuals who care to learn the lesson in that way.

American Shipping Officially Ignored

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES

WHY does not Congress call upon the Secretary of the Treasury for information as to why the provision of the new tariff for the encouragement of American shipping in foreign trade is not enforced?

Congress made a beginning in the establishment of a policy designed to build up American shipping in foreign trade. The Attorney-General assumes that Congress did not know what it was doing in drafting and amending that provision, and, therefore, he declares, in an opinion, that the section is contradictory and inoperative.

Taking the Attorney-General's ridiculous opinion as the basis, the Secretary of the Treasury directs collectors of customs throughout the country to ignore the provision of the section of the tariff designed to encourage American shipping. A law enacted by Congress, and approved by the President of the United States, is thus, in part, suspended. And it is suspended by a branch of the government whose duty it is to enforce it. The executive branch of the government has no authority whatever to suspend the operation of a law. In ordering the suspension the Secretary of the Treasury violates the law, and subjects himself to impeachment.

If the administration wishes to give encouragement to the result, it should keep on usurping the functions of the courts. Time was when the courts were very loath to declare that an act of Congress was inoperative. For a great many years the Federal courts refrained from such declarations. Latterly they have been more free in making them. Simultaneously the feeling has grown that we should have the result.

Now the branch of the government established to execute the law assumes the right to interpret it, to say that it is good law or bad law, that it is enforcible or non-enforcible. THE TENDENCY IS TOWARD THE USURPATION BY THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE VITAL FUNCTIONS OF THE LEGISLATIVE AND JUDICIAL BRANCHES OF THE GOVERNMENT. The tendency is toward an oligarchy, a dictatorship. It is just such incidents as this that give force and vitality to that tendency, that makes it more and more difficult for the people to check such tendencies.
